TRAVELERS' TALES ANNOUNCES A NEW IMPRINT AND LEAD TITLE

Solas House

Books and stories to inspire, motivate, and delight

Solas House is a new imprint from the award-winning editors at Travelers' Tales. Solas (the Irish for "light") House promises to expand the storytelling premise of Travelers' Tales beyond travel to wisdom for daily living, including books on spirituality, writing, gardening, thinking, humor, and the human condition. Solas House is launching with Stories to Live By: Wisdom to Help You Make the Most of Every Day, and will be followed by Gardening with Friends: Practical Essays by Master Gardeners, When in Doubt: 50 Remedies for Living in a Complex World, Stories to Live By for Writers, and other titles.

Stories to Live By takes the reader to what is essential in life and to what compels and awakens the soul. Notable authors include Rachel Naomi Remen, M.D., Neale Donald Walsch, Kurt Vonnegut, Maya Angelou, Michael Crichton, Robert Fulghum, Terry Tempest Williams, Viktor E. Frankl, and many more.

"A marvelous collection."

—Phil Cousineau, author of *Once and Future Myths

About Travelers' Tales: Since 1993, Travelers' Tales has published award-winning books about the world, adventure, spirituality, and the life-changing experiences that accompany life on the road. Our mission is to create better world citizens by showing how travel enriches lives, creates bridges of understanding between cultures, and develops more deeply educated individuals.
